With a new AIIB transformation based on infrastructure investment in the Hyperloop, next-generation transportation networks, and the Next Society, we can agree to unify a new next-generation society in Eurasia and realize the future.

Together with the agreement of member states, these will enable discussions on sharing new social infrastructure and the region's design and realization of its latest development.

These recreate all realities and ask for a new world power balance. We are trying to cooperate to develop regions according to the following generated standards.

We may share the same standard of all new technology and with the reconstruction of new infrastructures.

As we see, all new investments can only be permitted under the new standards to reestablish all its infrastructure and build new societies.

Then, we must know all new investments must be under all these standards and agreements to make all things shift to the next society.

If all these are possible under all new cooperations, we need to gather all their human resources to redesign all realities with new infrastructures.

We need to be sure that we have all the design maps of Eurasia, which are being developed using new technology and systems.

As we can see, all these new realities must solve all conflict in a region and may find new cooperation with its peace.

We can find a new presence of unification of the region, and the world may be changed with all new realities.
