

Called competition principle and reach final moment from the history of wars

KURODA International

Takeshi Kuroda

Competition makes any progress. That is all reality of today. Competition is continuously asking for all reality of the wars in the past on this planet. That means we can find the final winners.

Reality is always an answer that we can agree with. Finally, we reach a moment that is the end of history that we have.

On the other hand, power politics are all realities that we need to know as who may call the king that is a winner we have in the last moment of history.

That must be all learning that we spend in all history here on earth.

In history, we have more than any—number of kings and heroes. Finally, we find all truth then.

Due to wars are all realities in the past. That means there is a winner.

Back to the first description that competition continuously exists through wars of reality. And it gives all progress of reality under capitalism.

To see any reality of today, what I said is all true. Any realities are grown by competition. SO it has a winner. And any progress of beings is from all competition. On the other, there is socialism with his ideal.

The winner must take a world. That is always the law of reality.

The winner takes all. That means the king has a world.
