

Capitalism, market forces and future predictions in the free economy

KURODA International Foundation

Takeshi Kuroda

Technological innovation and capital in mega companies are clearly seeking a new future. These criteria cannot be ignored in the self-management of a company. They have the power to rule the world in market forces and free economy.

These are the two divisions of the complete world. It is divided into elite and non-elite. The elite has a high degree of education and career, while the other does not. Reality gives severe the difference.

Ownership of a company in the global market occupies next-generation technologies and systems in its capital strength. These giants create their cutting edge, and the products in the market are a permanent consumer trend.

New economic trends present the environment and morals and create a new world. People blindly obey wealth and trends.

These are the realities of the new world. The new life change created new kings in their technological and capital strengths.

There is always a new world of technological progress. By having it, they have great power. These realities are the only clear representation of the complete dichotomy of the world.

Therefore, we think that companies need to make new market participation by converting companies to their own survival based on the same standards.