Capitalist economy and future

KURODA International LLC

The reality of wealth asks the future whether it is right or wrong in capitalism. The arrival of a new technological society has the birth of superpower. These give new relationships between workers and capitalists. The dichotomy of these societies has a complete division of elites and workers.

These new presences, along with the capital power of the enterprise, will form a new capitalist society. Huge capital in the world drives the world with its new technology.

The demand for a new tax system on GAFAM is a new trend. But on the other hand, there is market dominance in capital strength.

These new competitive environments in the international market have the birth of super giants in terms of capital and technology.

This is the complete allocation of companies to new technological civilizations. A completely new hierarchy has its birth.

In these, the winner has the control of the world in the market principle and the competition principle.

The creation of these new futures in Meritocracy is a reality.

The birth of these super elites should bring about new changes in the world.

The advent of these new technological civilizations exists entirely with the dichotomy of the world. Elite and poor workers.
