

Comparative Cultural Studies

The earth has a history and has nurtured different cultures in each region. These have uniqueness and unique evolution, and today the world has that unity.

These have their own societies since the dawn of history, and their different evolutionary systems create differences.

These gain language development and differences between society and life. These have given different realities to progress in need and demand.

Given the unity of the world today, the justice and ideals of the West unify the world and give the creation of reality.

The world followed these in the fact that Western history was based on academic progress and formed modern scholarship.

Even today, with technological progress, the Industrial Revolution and the Social Revolution, the social system is based on different cultures, and the conflict of civilizations has one truth.

Life depends on the need in the past. Progress in the absolute requirement of survival is a cultural difference and progress.

These give the affluence of today a scrutiny of modernity to the reality of all cultures. These are the existence of new society and the creation of life in the world.

On the other hand, the reality of subordination to the West clearly exists. Slave to their excellence exists as justice.

However, the creation of self-culture in one's roots and background can enable the creation of reality in the new measure of inventive step rather than narrow nationalism.

These differences should never be denied under Western justice. The creation of good things can give the future in the progress of understanding.
