

Conversion to a new system

Kuroda International

Takeshi Kuroda

The challenge of survival and overcoming suffering can be agreed and planned to compensate for survival and create new goals for life. These propose the creation of completely different realities in the transition to a new economic system and the transition to basic income, and the social transformation in Industry 4.0 and Society 5.0.

These propose the limits of liberalism in new social transformations in new social systems. These propose a shift from a competitive society in liberalism to a new reality of symbiosis and equality.

These propose equality, not disparity, as the basis of a new technological civilization. The world's ideals of a pain-free world in the past and future seek its new direction in building political consensus.

These require a shift from a free society to a controlled society, and realize a social shift in the significant expansion of political presence.

These will form a consensus with the people to transform into a new society, and realize a 180° social transformation as a national policy.

These propose a completely new national image along with the construction of a new financial system.

Equally industry-academia-government consensus and collaboration will form new national guidelines for the utilization of new technologies and systems and the establishment of academic directions.

These call for a shift from the reality of competition to the consensus of equality, and propose a new form of the nation, along with a new reality of participation in a new universe.