

Creation of a new society with a circular economy and zero environmental impact and transition to the next society with the latest technology and philosophy

January 23rd, 2025

KURODA International Consulting LLC

Takeshi Kuroda

Shifting to the future under new political decisions. That means we are trying to make all our steps into the future.

And all these are possible under new political consensus and decisions. Recreation of all new societies and livelihoods may reach the next society.

Then, we need to know that we need a new philosophy based on the tails of new societies. These circular economies will achieve zero environmental impact.

In addition, creating a new society through collaboration with domestic industries through domestic demand and developing domestic sectors will be based on political decisions. It will realize zero environmental impact and foster new industries through domestic demand. These are the creation of new industries based on financial soundness, and by setting a zero ecological impact standard for products and establishing legal systems, products that place an environmental burden will be eliminated from trade, and domestic development will be realized.

It calls once again for a shift from coal and oil-based energy to clean energy and domestic infrastructure development.

All new technology transforms any society into the next society, which has new systems and is efficient in any reality, transforming your life into a richer one.

We have all new investments to develop new infrastructures that have new standards under political decisions.

The future will be realized through discussion among universities, bureaucrats, and industry, and along with the design of a new society, it will be decided and carried out by politics.