

The irreplaceable legacy of the future for all children

Kuroda International Foundation

Takeshi Kuroda

The world will be inherited by young people forever. It is the responsibility of adults to pass on the positive heritage of the world, not the negative heritage, to children.

We have history, and history has positive and negative heritage. Responsibility to the world must be correct, demand the creation of the right world, give children the right self-development, and fulfill their responsibilities to them.

The solution of moral problems and poverty must pass the future to children through the agreement and decision in the leap of technology and progress in the new era.

The new future has participation in the universe, and these will surely give the appearance of a new world.

The production of these histories is the creation of the future. As long as they have responsibilities in politicians and society, they are required to fulfill these responsibilities.

Children are not allowed to lose light from their eyes. This is the responsibility of adults.
