GAFAM is clearly a reality in a new era, and Boeing, Lockheed and others will make the transition to next-generation aircraft a reality. These are clearly transitioning from existing corporate reality to the future.

On the one hand, it is the participation in the possibilities, and on the other hand, it is the era of the enterprise. New innovations and digital revolutions clearly have the creation of a new future.

These are new realities in the present situation, and all companies have only participation in these realities. New possibilities in basic research promise a new reality in the future, along with the transition to new energies.

Huge capital has the selection and ownership of companies in the world. In addition, the new employment style will build its mega-presence in new corporate efficiency together with IT and IOT.

These overwhelming corporate powers do not give the achievement from the others. These perfect winners are creating the future.

These are required to participate equally in their ideas and concepts. Equality with the cutting edge of the world can be achieved by equalizing the content and understanding of the company.

These shifts in corporate standards are correct market perceptions and are the only ones that allow us to participate in the future.

All of these core competencies in the world have a unique corporate structure. These cannot be done in subordination.

These are the reality that all companies are required to reach the times, and the cutting edge in the world makes it possible to participate in the times in the construction of self-technology and systems.

On the other hand, great potential can be discovered. These are unknown creations, and their creativity gives the future.
