Responsibility and obligations to the people of politics

KURODA International Foundation

Takeshi Kuroda

Politics has its own responsibility and obligation to provide a basic living environment for all people. Accompanying it. Its protection and social construction, national security in the military, and proper foreign policy are required. Protecting the people needs to do so in the world.

These are politics' responsibility to the people, and the right political action gives the right nation.

Democracy is the politics of the people, and each person is held responsible for it.

This is the modern reality of national autonomy, derived from the civil society of ancient Greece in Athens.
