

KURODA International

Create the future

Sharing basic life

KURODA International Foundation

Takeshi Kuroda

Proposing a equal living environment and society for all citizens in the concept of basic human rights gains the creation of a world in a new political agreement. These can make new social developments based on the basic income foundation and the concept of working obligations.

The provision of living environment to citizens enables the realization of inexpensive treatments by providing a large amount of standardized environment by politically agreeing to provide the environment in advanced systems to all citizens. Even in these fiscal expenditures, social improvement and livelihood improvement agree in politics the need in the definition of basic human rights in the provision of basic human life and social development to all.

These are proposals for new possibilities in a new world, and it is possible for politics to reach its own consensus as a need to seek a new future, along with current technological innovations.

These can seek to create a new world, such as drastic changes in tax systems and construction of social systems, demands and planning in fiscal spending, conversion to new state management systems, and reconstruction of working and social systems. ..

Along with the improvement of the basic living environment, the realization of new possibilities is all about the solution of poverty and the sharing of living infrastructure among all citizens, as well as the state's realization of cutting-edge in the new era in society. Citizens are clearly determined to realize their participation in the world and the future.