

The reality of motivation

Kuroda International Foundation

Takeshi Kuroda

All reality exists on the basis of motivation. Motivation exists as a willingness to work in a company. These new working environments, such as new working styles, GAFAM and NETFRIX, differ from the motivation to work along with the corporate philosophy.

These are motivated to work because of their correctness in the environment and consideration. This is because the reality of forced gives a loss of motivation, and the reality of personal willing always gives motivation.

This is always a motivation-based difference when contrasting the reality of tropics and laziness in the Republic of India and the reality of diligence on the other hand.

In the principle of competition and capitalism, the prize of money and the victory in the competition are the basis of these. I think these are correct in the liberal camp with this reality. I think that these cannot be denied even in GAFAM and NETFRIX.

However, it is a correct requirement for human beings to carry out their original requirements and purposes. As primates, these are not the principles of survival, and the reality of their sublime can enable the creation of a new future.

Decreased motivation always results in self-loss. Motivation must provide its living and working environment. They have a guarantee of survival and seek their stability.

These are to grasp all the information and to stabilize the self, and the self who has left the survival is given the most motivation to seek the purpose of the life.