

KURODA International

Create the future

Transition to a new civilization in overcoming survival

KURODA International Foundation

Takeshi Kuroda

History was dominated by survival and war, and the foundation of survival has the present in economic supremacy in the principle of competition. These are the overcoming of survival in new academic progress, which allows all to seek a transition to a new world where survival is guaranteed.

Overcoming these absolutes of survival can lead to the creation of new civilizations. The creation of society in basic income and new social systems, along with the new information infrastructure in IOT, can make the future a reality.

The creation of these philosophies that depart from the foundation of survival allows humankind to make new progress, and philosophies can depart from the foundation of survival, explore purposes and missions, and realize their future.

Participation in the universe allows them to interact with a shared foundation, cooperation with these cosmic beings clearly enables the creation of a new world, and participation in the universe has endless possibilities for the Earth to participate in.

These new ideals of symbiosis can shift from conflict to reconciliation and from conflict to dialogue, proposing the unification of the world and the creation of the future.

These are existing realities, and political judgment and consensus can make them with any realities.