

Trump 2.0 and the New World

January 21st, 2025

KURODA International Consulting LLC

Takeshi Kuroda

The world must be changed under the new king of the USA. But the world must be forced to make its own decisions.

America's shift to an 'America First' approach will likely require all nations worldwide to implement new self-policies.

The reality of a new world is one in which there are conflicts, progress, and various progressive forces.

These must be all new changes with the emergence of President Trump.

Change in the world means seeking new realities under new relationships of all nations.

We need to know how to hold world visions. To seek a new world, we need all its new designs.

If America moves away from world governance and returns to its homeland, this could lead to the formation of a new world order.

The transition from Pax Americana to maintaining and managing a new world through consensus building through dialogue makes it possible to agree on a new world framework through dialogue.

Sharing the world and the future may be a new basis for a world that seeks solutions to all conflicts.

However, all these are from new changes due to the emergence of President Trump; we need to be careful of any realities. We are trying to avoid any confusion but are seeking new cooperation.

So, Dialogue is a way to make any reality of ours.