

KURODA International

Create the future

Wealth inequality and future needs

KURODA International Foundation

Takeshi Kuroda

Poverty in the world gives reality along with its disparity. World trends give reality in their cutting edge, and the world follow with it. Politics always mandates state management in the right understanding and choice.

These contradictions seek resolution in humanitarian political judgment and action, private sector participation and new social reconciliation.

These require the world to be self-solution with an agreement to provide all with participation in the future.

These are the demands of new philosophies and the need for the future in the construction of social systems, and politics needs to drive them.

Politics is obliged to provide all peoples with participation in the future.

These agreements can enable world reconciliation and sharing of a new future.

The reality of competition and economicism in capitalism has an affirmation of the need for survival, and politics guarantees survival, allowing people to transform into doing their purpose. The construction of these new social systems is possible in the current Industrial Revolution and Digital Revolution, and political consensus can make them happen.