Create the future

National transformation in a new era

KURODA International Foundation

Takeshi Kuroda

The new era of participation in space will give a new nation-building along with cooperation with the military in the gathering of human resources in their own country, the construction of a development and academic environment, and the construction of bases.

The new technological civilization is no longer a dream. These enable major changes in society and life.

These are all the realities of a new era in academic progress. Therefore, the education and university environment can create a new era.

These can realize the construction of a new nation by demanding new standards for all political actions.

Action always gives reality, and planning is a promise of reality.

The self-standards in the nation can surely realize the nation-building in those standards.

Basic income and share economy should be considered as new era demands from a socialist competitive society. I think that these give the future as a real conflict.

The world has the past in war, and there are winners and losers forever. It is possible for the world to abandon war and gain unity as an agreement in all its nations.
