

Demand for national independence

Kuroda International Foundation

Takeshi Kuroda

The independence of a nation means that it can carry out its own policies and philosophies. To be enslaved to another country is to make the demands of another country.

Therefore, independence are always the lifelines of the nation. They have to do the nation in their own efforts.

What other countries provide is that they have it. Therefore, self-participation in modern times and reality means that one's own country builds an equal nation in terms of its cutting edge and reality, and makes equal participation in the world.

They are to build academic, self-equality, and equality in all of technology, military, industry, capital, and politics in your own country.

These are the only choices in reality. Following justice with the media never gives equality in reality.