

Industrial security

Takeshi Kuroda

National security in all industries is the only choice to maintain its independence. Along with holding capital, political security policy is the only one in the world to maintain its own country.

These clearly have political consensus and require their own independence in the military and industry, capital and diplomacy.

In the reality of the world, the liberal camp with capital, military and political power in the private sector and politics will surely confront this reality in the future because it has the plan of the New World Order behind it.

These are always the right choices in politics. However, superpower in the world always asks the tolerance of those realities. That is, institutions and intelligence agencies in America and Europe seek control over all of those realities.

Therefore, a political consensus on independence is urgently required to build equality with all these realities of the world.

The reality of the world is not the reality of the media. It must confront the reality of power politics.

So these choices are always correct. In addition, equality is required for the capital power of America, Europe, and Jews.

Equality is an illusion but reality. It is about building one's equality in all reality.
