

Political agreement and agreement with the people

KURODA INTERNATIONAL FOUNDATION

Takeshi Kuroda

A political agreement is a promise of realization, and a political agreement between the people is a promise of realization. These have everything possible. Therefore, the instructions to the bureaucrats for planning and rehabilitation of plans can always be realized.

These are the same in democratic and one-party dictatorships.

They enable the creation of new nations in public consensus and political decisions, which seek their realization as a goal and future.

Debate and highest goals in politics and bureaucracy are by no means impossible to realize, which is always possible in decisions and actions.

A humanitarian society denies and excludes coercion and inhumane reality, and has the soundness of society and life in itself.

It is not meaningless for politics to talk about ideals.

What a politician dreams of is always a nation and peoples.

Office to access the world.