Create the future

Between ideal and reality

History on Earth has a self in the praise of heroes and the suffering of the weak. When the world seeks the future, will the prayers of the weak be denied forever? Will they not be allowed to have their own dreams forever? These questions give us participation in conflicts and contradictions in the new world.

The future has its eternal permanence in itself, and who has the future? Will all tears in the past be denied the word forever?

Those pasts have their prayers, and having a future is the greatest challenge.

The birth of America is an obvious challenge. They fought, and victory gives them that ideal.

These are the sharing of ideas and ideals, and the challenge of sharing the future. Conflicts in race and nationality have their hatred and cannot be resolved.

All heroes had that ideal and got into the fight against the world.

This is the end of history, the world's choice for an eternal future. The king has the world in his choice.
