Self country security

KURODA International Foundation

Takeshi Kuroda

Politics is the only one who is given self in integrity.

Security is to have military power, capital, and industry in your own country. It gives self-independence. If you have it in another country. They have your own country.

These are self-reliant and the only conditions of independence.

Diplomacy is based on its philosophy and cooperation in self-defense. That is, politics must only seek honesty and deny its lies.

Human resources have their own abilities. Ability is to give reality as possible, and learning is the only choice to give that ability. Therefore, the educational environment is the bases of the nation.

The correct understanding of reality is that possession of information is correct participation in the world, and the only response to reality is required along with independence.

These enable the development of one's own country as a shared understanding base for politicians. That is, seeking oneself in slavery is the only abandonment of oneself.
