

KURODA International
Create the future

A basic research and space development

KURODA International Consulting

Takeshi Kuroda

Expanding in any reality field, we are trying to prepare for all new environments. We are stepping into a new generation with new academical standards.

Basic research is fundamental if we seek any future, as we can find any environment in the USA that is more than any reference for our challenge.

And in Washington, D.C., we can find all political environments that could support an all presence in any realities from politics. That made all creation possible.

All these are the fundamentals for us to seek space development. Any realities must be required on all its bases if we are forwarding to any possibilities.

All new development in basic research create new realities in a nation and make it possible with a future.

Information gathering and analysis in America, England, and Israel, scientific reality research and its cutting edge, space data collection and analysis, etc., give them an absolute advantage. This is because these self-foundations are always required when we seek reality.

The cutting-edge and creativity of America's present industries have a brighter future. This gives a correct future prediction. Building a political consensus is, therefore, the only way a nation can be established in the future.

I believe all these things can be achieved by constructing the foundation of basic research and its cutting-edge reality.

All reality bases can only allow the construction of equality.

Having a future must be based on independence, not subordination. That is the equality with the world that is required of the self.

KURODA INTERNATIONAL