

A new future created by the Western camp

April 25th, 2025

Kuroda International Consulting

Takeshi Kuroda

Under white supremacy, the world may seek the reconstruction of all realities. These are the grand resets, as we may find in any summary of the Davos conference.

From all perspectives, we must consider any lifeline to keep a nation alive. International financial groups may seek a new future with their wealth.

We can find that the world is under plans. On the other hand, we may find decisions from the universe. These are all we can share to discover reality today.

Lastly, we have our foundation of reality, any alliance among nations that merely allows us to pursue a new world and a future.

These are their most significant conflicts: the conscience of the West is the justice of the world. Then we can help them with any efforts they make.

Today is a turning point for the future, where what is given to us is a choice.

These are the realities that all politicians face. And despite the world's current turning points, we may find all hope in the future.

Reconstruction of the world may be under new consensus and principles which may base any future on reconstruction by new technologies.

We have all progressed in academics, which may reconsider the world with any recreation of reality from any history.

These represent the creation of the next society, and we are facing the turning points of all histories that may lead to a new civilization with innovative technologies. This is why we are influencing decisions in all politics.