These are the new laws and rules that we may discuss and share. We can find that this is how we can create a new world.

We also have new arguments, which may create a world of their own. These are all requests from the international community, and we may make a new world ourselves.

All these principles may constitute an agreement and consensus we can share to recreate the world itself.

These are how we may reach the future, and these are the deepest considerations of all realities.

We can see how we can redesign the world. And these are the results of all our progress.

We need to be so eager to ask for all these new dialogues. And it may be the decision of the world.

A new idea may be the new world itself. And this is why we need to argue with the world. We have all the use of any academics who may propose a new world and its system.

Politicians must ask about their progress at this point to gauge the views. The new world may be based on new principles and ideas.

We have all our new steps into the international Conference, and they may agree on all the latest ideas of the new world.

All these are the new responsibilities for the world, instead of the current world system, for a new system based on them.

This is why we are forcing any decision in world politics.
