

A political consensus to serve fundamental livelihood to all peoples

KURODA International Consulting

Takeshi Kuroda

There is all suffering. We find many socially vulnerable. Moral decay can have a reality. So we stop our steps in the future and seek a solution that is all our proposals.

How could we serve livelihood to all people? We can do them by political consensus and its decision.

Capitalism and the principle of competition give a hierarchical society. And the current innovation has its full excitement with the free economic system.

Then we have an idea that we could seek new world frameworks and systems.

From helping the weak and equality, providing basic livelihoods to all citizens and the consensus base in politics can explore the future.

It is the right political choice to avoid stragglers in the future. These are the right choices if we have a responsibility to the world.

Politics must hold people accountable. This is a political duty.

If we are trying to create the future, we need a suitable base. All new technology and systems are full of use, even forcing us to determine ourselves.

If paradise exists, we may not create any suffering. A world without suffering is the right world choice and ideal. The first step is, therefore, to propose these agreements.