Priority and necessity are to be given all life and future to its children in the Gaza Strip. This is the world priority we must agree with.

As members of the international community, it is our collective responsibility to champion and uphold humanism as a shared value. Our consensus and decisions are pivotal in this mission.

To be compared between all children in the USA and Gaza Strip, we must find the irony of equality.

The pursuit of personal interests can only give rise to conflict and strife. We must notice and learn from the past, but we still can't find why we need all conflict and wars.

I can explain why. How many tears can we find in the Gaza Strip? This is the proper answer based on our correct understanding of ourselves.

How could we ignore all tragedy? This shows all our failures.

If we find one who is the real politician who saves the world and serves us in the future, we can finally save the world from any history of wars.

The reality of competition in liberalism and the praise for victory that accompanies it give rise to conflict and strife in pursuing one's interests. On the other hand, the existence of humanitarianism is a contradiction. Understanding these things in the progress of philosophy presents a shift from the principle of competition that gives rise to conflict and strife to the idea of coexistence, which is the new socialism.

And who may take all responsibility for any tears we find with all children of the Gaza Strip?

These could be solved under conscience. And real humanism may not ignore their tears.
