

Anthropology Sociology

A person has self-development and forms a society. This is the reality of advances from animal instincts and intellect.

The existence of language gives an accumulation of intellect and advances in society. The instinct of running a family expands, as do culture and reality. The foundation of survival has instinct and desire, and the self has an inventive step as a social existence.

Intelligence is an understanding of reality and its progress has today's world. The principle of action of love is all commonality, and reality always embraces it.

Intelligence is the difference between the primitive world and the civilized world. The progress of different cultures and civilizations has unity in academics in modern Western academics.

Instinct always has love. This entire existence is a fundamental principle in life. This standard is the proper measure of progress, and all realities allow judgment in it.

This affinity of love forms a society. This proves the truth that love has a community as correct.

In that reality on earth has enslavement, the reality of love and its depletion proves the difference between the fair society and the enslaved reality.

On the other hand, there is the absolute justice of survival. The need for survival dominated in the past, and academic and technological advances are for humankind to move to a new stage.

This guarantees survival and humankind can realize the quest and desire for purpose. Together with space technology, these can allow humanity to seek the creation of a new world.