

Basic income and the new world

July 14th, 2024

KURODA International Consulting

Takeshi Kuroda

We can propose basic income and a new world in a new social system without the competition principle.

These are totally in opposition to the Free economic system with its competition. But we are allowed to seek for our purpose under new systems.

Our proposal is not just a theoretical concept. We have already begun the transition from competition to symbiosis, demonstrating the feasibility of a more collaborative and sustainable future.

Our proposal guarantees the survival and fundamental livelihood of all peoples, providing a secure foundation for progress in technology and society.

New space technology allows us to make all our steps into the universe. We face all these changes today under its evolutionary shift to the future.

If the dream promises a new relationship with aliens, they try to share the future with us and the whole universe. What can we find in the future?

To seek for all history, any dreams are occupied by all kings but not for any peoples. But we went through a revolution in the 20th century in the USA, and we have made progress in our livelihood today in any region of the world.

Above is any bass we are severed today under reality which s facing new futures.

Politics must decide and declare the new future as we have all new possibilities today.

In the past, any reality was occupied by survival requirements, but all progress we have today is a shift to new civilizations in the future. And we may know that these are with politics by its decisions.