

Bilateral Alliance Proposals in Having a World

Kuroda International Consulting

Takeshi Kuroda

Explicitly seeking to have a world, and joining the new world based on an alliance, is to cooperate with all realities.

These full bilateral alliances are agreements to confront reality and build a new world of shared ideas.

These advance the technology of the next generation, reach the 9th generation and carry out social development based on these new technical standards. These will establish new industrial standards in the government's provision of technology to the private sector and realize the construction of a new reality with a significant political presence.

Also, these new technical standards will expand our ties with space, and our participation in space will be with space in a unique alliance contract. These technological breakthroughs will make all the difference in reality.

Through an explicit agreement of victory and possession of the world, these realize the construction of reality in the world and the formation of self-groups in that cooperation.

These foreshadow economic and military wars. We don't hate them; we want to win.

All these are the realization of the possibility as we propose under all considerations to the world.

We have a choice in the future. And the choice is the future that we have to know.

Any reality is all from decisions and aims. They are called measures and standards. Anything must follow them in reality.

The limitation is the only excuse that we may not work for.
