

Capital Power

Takeshi Kuroda

If we ask for a reality, we must find all these come from capital power. It allows any facts and the future.

To face the world, we find all the presence of the Western camp. And the way we may reach them and what they never permit is the same capital use. All these are the habits from the colonial ages.

And we see all the failures of the economy to find them to be their tools in Progressed countries.

The world is under the control of its capital. Under capitalism, there is no doubt, but we see at Langley.

Capitals may not be from industry but from investments. That is all the world's reality, and these capitals are now seeking new technologies to create the future.

How could we stand equally to all these realities? We need at least the same environment. That must be an answer, and we need a national strategy to make ourselves aware of the facts.

Politics must know them as its consensus. We need a future, and equality is the only necessity we can work for. At least we need to be enslaved.

The world is under the power game. And let me ask the question: Who is following justice? We need to put ourselves in the reality.

And we see more of its nations only follow but not with its independence.

This is a presence of the world. And the wise may not work under Langley.

We could dream of a future, but we need the right action.
