

Collapse of the economy and shift to the new future

April 1st, 2025

Kuroda International Consulting LLC

Takeshi Kuroda

The economy is the basis of society and life. But we have all new changes in the economy under unilateralism.

With all demands of survival is any principle of all histories. And the economy is all demand itself, even asking for differences from all histories.

We can find all these collapsing, the falling of all reality of the past, which we are seeking, and making all its shifts to recreate the world in the future.

If we need to recreate the world, we must break them once. Then, we can build a new world.

The key is that the economy is everything based on its survival principles, which have covered every reality of history. If we are trying to shift to a new future, we may have to make new decisions about its economy.

All these proofs show that we need a new philosophy to create a new future. Any progress in academics permits a new world.

And politics determines everything that happens in the world. We have new talent who have new hopes.

So, we have insisted on new socialism with basic income and new world systems. And they permit us to seek any purpose in our lifetime under new world systems.

These are the shifts in world principles. We now have a new technological civilization right in front of us all.

We have tried to consult the world with new philosophies.