

Consequence and action

December 18th, 2024

KURODA International Consulting LLC

Takeshi Kuroda

All reality must only follow the world. But who may raise a new world against it?

You have a choice to follow or make. We need to possess our world vision to confront new realities.

The world is moving to new conflicts that we need to know. However, gathering the world under a new world vision may be possible with its decisions.

Industry, military, justice, and philosophy are all new bases on which we can propose a new world in contrast to the existing one.

Then we have diplomacy, which seeks the same consensus and agreement to a new future.

Consequences may give us an opportunity, and actions may provide us with a new reality. We need to try to cause the world.

Proposing a consensus of reason and ideals is never a waste; it must be worthwhile. If the world has new visions and promises, we will find it in the future.

All politics may become a new world that shares new agreements and consensus.

We can't and may not ask for any conflict if we seek a new world since any conflict may not contain the new world.

The new world may be based on all agreements, not any direction or occupation. So, if we propose a new reality, all nations may be forced by their decisions.

Real politicians make the world based on the determination of their minds and will. That is an attitude we must have to make it with a world to shift all reality to a new future.