All progress under competition may shift to new philosophies, which we continuously find all its future. This is society's new basis, called the next society.

We have all new digitalization and have shifted society under Society 5.0 standards. We have a circular economy and a zero-emission society.

We can reestablish society under any decision of all politics, which may be totally different from any reality of the past but with a new future.

New technology makes it possible to create new civilizations. We need to know that these civilizations create new realities under all economic progress, so we need rigorous economic policy.

In reality, today, the transition to a new future is a fest of madness that abandons all its philosophical foundations and celebrates new technological advances.

These are shifting to new communication, transportation such as a hyperloop, and new administration systems, which we need to spend all consideration and plans to redesign ourselves for the future.

AIIB could fund all new investments, and we need to rebuild all infrastructure according to the latest standards.

Moreover, because these are the last chances for the revival of domestic industry, these realities must be built on domestic capital and companies.

We have proposed new socialism which tails all these new technological civilizations, and new investment must be covered under domestic capitals which recreate the nation's reality. We have all its national security to recreate all realities of the country.
