We have a choice called diplomacy to change any reality. And it may change the reality we see right in front of us.

Western camp and liberal camp are all majority and have their justice against any reality of the world. But we need to put ourselves into the world and must find a way to the future,

We need to be the right companions to all realities, and asking for conflict may not be a wise decision for us, but we should share new ideas and visions of the world.

We need to know the conflict only asks for any result of itself, but we have a different choice to seek for the future.

If we could be away from all conflict but new relationships with the world, we may propose our vision to the world.

To be wise, we find a way to the future, but to be an idiot means losing ourselves. These are any political decisions we are required to make.

These are the creations of difference. Diplomacy is a way to make it.

Any guideline to run a nation should be deeply considered, and we need our new presence in international society.

We can't close any doors, since these are the possibilities we are given.

Then, we may find differences and reestablish ourselves in the world.

We could debate the world and its future; if there is any agreement we can share with the world, that is a way to work for the future.
