

Economic policy

June 6th, 2024

Kuroda International Consulting

Takeshi Kuroda

We must swiftly shift our focus to newly generated technology and systems. The future is upon us, and we must be prepared to embrace it.

The economy has itself with its security. A free trade system may be better, but we must run our country.

Technology, a product of academic and industrial self-development, is not a mere option. It is our key to leading the market, not just following it, and maintaining our competitive edge.

It is crucial to recognize that politics can significantly reshape our economic environment under any decision or plan that we try to pursue in the future.

If the economy is subjugated, the country will be conquered. These are demands for the development of domestic industry and independence.

All these may be calculated under national security. All progressed nation have their security and their visions for the economy.

The above is a proper idea for our economic policy. Wise politicians only seek the independence of their nation.

If we are aware of this truth, we need to take new economic action plans for this nation.

We may know that the power game of the world only permits victory and defeat. These are some truths about world politics and realities.

We first find the truth of the West. Then, we have our decisions for the future.

As we examine all the details of world politics, we must realize that the power game is a reality. So, we have to make a proper choice for a nation.