

Free economic system and free trade system

April 16th, 2025

KURODA International Consulting

Takeshi Kuroda

The world has its economic system, which is the basis of any financial action. But related to any occupation of the highest industry and its hierarchy, we have a choice to seek new systems.

With all its international financial reality, we find no basis for the economy. But to see the reality from the point of view of national security, there are all decisions of national economic policy.

The free trade system gives an international division of business. These are constructed by any measure of all progress of systems and technologies.

Having domestic capital with industries in all sectors is the correct national security in the economy.

Furthermore, all of these need to be produced domestically in the country's military industry in order to develop a military that is on par with that of the world's most advanced nations.

All these points of view are the proper ideas for constructing national security. If a nation seeks independence, these are the choices it must make for itself.

For a nation to gain all the progress of life, we may wonder how all its industry and finance must be. These are the economic and financial policies that a nation must consider themselves.

All these ideas stand against the reality of the world as an international financial group and the occupation of the highest technologies. But these are the necessities of a nation to ask for its own future.

We have all new design of the world. And we may say that rules must be agreed on.