

From dogmatism to consensus global decision-making

January 14th, 2025

KURODA International Consulting LLC

Takeshi Kuroda

Under the presence of the Western and liberal camps, a new world may be sought upon consensus from all nations. And it could give us all unification of the world.

Standardization in globalization allows every nation to assert itself and aspire to new wealth.

These convergences, not dogmatism, are consensual and can offer the possibility of creating a new world.

These may be conversations by all consciences of the world that stand against all reality we have with the world.

Above all, we can share all the new possibilities for the future. And we may share the same future.

A politician can do this because he has hope.

These ideas of the new world may share all new potential and any possibility with history and the future.

Even under all its votes, we may ask the world, and the majority makes all decisions for the world.

But we may know any conscience of the West gave the world today, so we need our decisions.

We can agree with all nations regarding a new world if we find fairness in all new realities.

These are the agreements for a new world in which we may share all our new dreams, a future.

Politics makes decisions, and we may follow all of its choices. These are proof politics make the world.