

Intelligence agencies

March 8th, 2026

KURODA International Consulting LLC

Takeshi Kuroda

What we see in Iran is all the effect of intelligence agencies. And we have a full necessity to build at least the same conditions as there are.

These are the tales of a nation and its necessity for its own national security.

They are so organized and systematized in their reality; it means we have to organize and systematize all our realities.

These are all new ideas on how we can build our own political environment and organizations, since that information may be the only necessity in the future.

We can see that all these are things that only we can be concerned about in the world. Then the information allows us to take diplomatic actions.

Systematize and organize reality allows us to achieve results and efficiency of realities and gives us the possibility to realize any purpose. These give us the first time to make use of the digitalization of realities.

These are ideas on how we can reconstruct our own political realities.

Information only allows us to make proper decisions. And as we saw in Iran, they allow us to make reality even.

From these peaks, it is possible to renew the entire nation and transition to a new reality, and I believe that carrying this out alongside digitalization is in line with the times and reality.

Politics must always be the first runner. And the nation must follow it.

We find that a politician has the decision of the nation, even with a future.