Liberalism first permits the dream and the future. Authoritarianism takes that away. This is a battle for every individual to win their future.

The fight against all those in power is a revolution towards a new future in which people own the world.

We have a choice that makes a new world under democracy. These are the proposals for the new future in which all people reach their dreams.

No one may take away any individual's decision. These are the human rights we have to share with the world.

And we see that these are the decisions of the new world for all people.

These works propose a new ideal of a world of people, inheriting America's 20th-century human face revolution and proposing a new future.

The new world system offers the possibility and promise of the world's future. We may find that we have now reached our dreams and the future. Politics may share them with all people.
