

Liberalism and improvement of the reality

Kuroda International Consulting

Takeshi Kuroda

Liberalism seeks its superior reality in an environment of freedom and the improvement of society. This is the engine of the world today. The word is the justice of humanitarianism.

Human progress has given real improvement in motivation and action. This thirst for survival has given the evolution of humanity.

These realities mean that human progress exists in a continuum of aspirations and improvements in life. Advances in science and technology today have the most significant amount of change. This is because the realities of liberalism and free economic systems allow these changes.

These principles of survival and competition give rise to progress on the same survival as in the past, which cannot be denied.

Understandably, only today is a tipping point. This is for a tipping point of participation in space and a new technological civilization.

It should be noted that these keywords are understanding and agreement based on survival needs because these technological advances provide an overcoming survival needs.

These present the difference between reality demands in survival demands and creation in the inventive step of intelligence.

These advances present challenges to overcome and provide choices for the future. These allocations are indeed a choice for the reality of the future.

It is fitting that the liquidation of all these histories is the final judgment on the reality of the future. In having the breath of a new civilization today, precise self-selection demands reaching the existence of the future.