

Middle East and the reality of the wars in the world

May 28th, 2024

Kuroda International Consulting

Takeshi Kuroda

It is of utmost urgency that we grasp the reality of wars in the Middle East. We cannot afford to passively observe the world's evolution, but must actively strive to shape a new world.

Unfortunately, we may not have any choices to put ourselves into reality. The only option we have is to create a new world.

Military presence, while currently dictating our reality, holds the potential to be a catalyst for a new world. Rather than being subservient to these circumstances, we can deploy the military to shape a new reality.

The world's reality is composed of conflict and has a conflict structure. Participating in reality in reconciliation and cooperation is a brave choice.

These must be less of a possibility, but we have a worth to try them.

Conflict in a divided world is all reality we have today. But we may see all reality solutions under dialogue, even propose a new future.

On the other hand, the choice is the World War 3rd.

The United Nations stands as a beacon of hope in the midst of global conflicts. It is the platform where all arguments converge, offering a glimmer of possibility for a more peaceful future.

All these conflicts may be solved under all agencies to reach the same vision and agreement by the above place.

All nations should share hope, but any disappointment. We have paid all our efforts into the world, and the choice is all yours.