

National security in the far east

Kuroda International Consulting

Takeshi Kuroda

To construct peace in the region, we need to argue and cooperate in new relationships in an area.

Peace must be a mutual benefit, and all these must be a regional consensus. And we could build a new reality in the area.

Under the vision of peace, we could propose a regional conference to seek a regional future.

A peace agreement in the region can deny war in the area and enable the rebuilding of relations in debate and the construction of a new future.

These regional stabilizations can transform the global military balance. This is clearly the power of peace.

By shifting from confrontation in the historical background to regional unity and cooperation, we can present our new presence and vision to the world.

All these could stand equally to Angrosaxon's mission. That means we are equally facing the world.

We could give a full invitation to Russia. We have to know these are the complete agreement of the peace.

If we could build cooperation in the area, we could seek the future under the new reality based on the new possibilities.

A new world order may face all these realities. And how could we find a difference between them?

We had a challenge. We are trying to change the world from our office.