Philosophy is any basis we could build and seek the world as we could count on all its progress in history.

A new society needs its basis with a philosophy. That makes it possible to build a new technological civilization.

We have a new possibility with a world and need their bases. All these possibilities could expend themselves under all these bases of philosophy.

Taking all responsibility for the world and the people may be the duty of all politics. This is the only possibility we have in the future.

Life and society are any basis on which we could find any realities. The new system is based on the philosophy that serves us livelihood. People must establish themselves on learning experience, an idea with righteousness and consequences.

Capitalism and Liberalism are the justice of the world today. But philosophy could consider the world in new realities.

Based on livelihood, we find all conflict with any competition. But we have to seek peace and reconciliation. The principle of survival is any basis we see in the history of wars.

As we reach this planet's progress, we have all new technological civilization right before our future.

All academic progress has a use for the world that allows us to create a new world.

These are any bases of the world with new consensus of politics. We determine ourselves in the new future. That is all our effort. We need hope that is all from our challenge and any effort of ourselves.
