Reality is only a permission for us to seek the future. Under all decisions, we have to take care of ourselves to reach our new futures.

Domestic policy is only a remark and necessity for us to rush ourselves to make any reality of ours.

That basis makes everything possible. We have permission to create a new nation and society for our livelihood.

These are the new decisions of any realities under political choices. We may gather all new talents from any field of the nation and recreate all realities.

Industry is the backbone, and it is creating new futures itself, so we need our economic security to develop it under domestic demand and capital.

Others may lack finance. Above all, we must recreate the nation to shift to a new society and livelihood.

In this context, military security requires an immediate shift to next-generation technology, establishing an independent defense system based on independence.

Then diplomacy determines the fate of the nation.

New space technology cooperates with the universe of its residents, and their technology gives us all use to make all our steps into the universe.

If I were to face a king, he would have all his decisions as the nation's fate.

Reality only exists for us to participate in the future. And our decision is the future itself.
