

New political consensus

January 27th, 2025

KURODA International Consulting LLC

Takeshi Kuroda

The world is moving toward a new world, and all of its agreements are tied to this new world. But we can't avoid any realities, so we need to take new actions.

There is a choice to seek a new world instead of any reality we have with a world. If we are trying it, we need our design of all realities.

And if we have a new consensus of the world, which should be argued in international society and made into an agreement, these may cause a part of reality in the world.

New world agreements may realize the future. We can see that to reach all those consensuses, we need dialogue to share all new consensuses.

These are the choices we face against the world. And if we decide on a new world, we must show new consensus and actions.

Dialogue allows us to explore the world and find our way. Any agreement is a reality that we will have in the future.

We all have worth in making new international principles. After all these circumstances, we may only be permitted to seek by all realities.

This means we did everything we could, so we must succeed using all the forces available to us.

We are from the world with justice to a reality. Power balance may not be decided by justice but by reality itself.

These are the reality of all politics; we must work for them. We need our reality based on any reality of the world, which must contain any possibility we have to seek for the future.