

New survivors and winners in the economy

Kuroda International

Takeshi Kuroda

The new economic system has the frenzy and parties with its winners. This is an irony of ants and grasshoppers.

These unimaginable capital and technological capabilities have the promise of creating a new world.

The excellence of the elite cannot be understood by who its failed.

The envy to them is a reality. The creation of a new world is exactly the creation of a dream.

These give the dichotomy of those who have participation in reality and those who fall. The middle class is falling.

These then move on to the future. People's choices are still unknown.

These winners and losers can be reversed. Because the Cuban Revolution gave it.

The transformation from the economic system under the Zion Protocol calls for the creation of new capitalism.

These can, as options, suggest a shift to a share economy and the creation of opportunities to participate in these future realities in basic income.

However, the reality of the future and advanced technologies and systems are real, and participation in the market must follow this.

Reaching these standards in corporate effort gives the company stability.

The logic of the loser and the logic of the winner are different because the winner in the market always has himself with his own efforts and ability.
