To assume full responsibility for the livelihood of all people, we must first identify all the duties of all political entities.

That is all we can strive for, and we should make agreements and cooperate with all nations.

There is a possibility of reconstructing the world under a new world framework. These are the result of all the progress of all academics.

All new technology has use and efficiency in reality, we can rebuild all social environments, shifting to the next society.

Then we can find that we need a new world framework and systems. And these new bases may allow us to recreate the world for the future.

These may propose new dialogues and arguments that allow us to share the same ideas, creating common ground for recreating the world. As we can see, new rules and laws may be based on a new world.

We can find that these are the result of any progress of mundanity. And a new consensus may be found in our progress in reality.

The coming new future must be based on new rules, as it may be called new world systems. In the economy, finance, education, military, and society must be under the authority of new rules.

These require all new arguments and must reach the same consensus and agreement, which may cause the world to be new.

We have an idea from our office in the far east, and it may expand to an unlimited universe and for the future.
