

Own capital and economic security in all development

KURODA International Consulting

Takeshi Kuroda

If we put ourselves in the world, we need to make the right decision for our economy.

There is economic policy in politics. We have to know how we find the future in our reality today.

We know that there is a new reality in the economy. These include security in semiconductors and market dominance in advanced industries.

From the point of view of national security, we reach for a necessity of our economic policy. Developing these industries using domestic capital is the right way to build self-security.

We know under the world's new reality, we have all the necessities of national economic security. International strategy is based on self-reliance and independence and requires self-reality construction.

As we know, we find all free trade systems. Under any consideration, we see there are purposes with a reality.

Under national security, we need industries in any field. These alliances in the military and industrial areas make it possible to construct a correct self-reality in one's foreign policy. Trade agreements, cooperation in cutting-edge industries, and the creation of self-contained economic zones must also be considered.

We have to know that any creation of realities is all from new industries in the future. We are sure there is a new future with new technologies and the latest technological civilization. That causes us to make the right decision.

We have a total calculation of the reality, Which means we can work for the future. Thank you.
