

Planning in politics and a new national vision

December 5th, 2023

Kuroda International Consulting

Takeshi Kuroda

The future is the realization of plans. That is what we need to pay for all our efforts.

With all the evolutionary changes we have today, we could redesign the nation under all digitalization and next-generation technologies.

We are trying to make these decisions to create a new nation, leaving the past to the future.

We must know that all new technology and systems differ from the past, as we put all necessities into reality today.

The new system must govern all reality as we are trying to propose plans to recreate society and life.

These are the requirements of new political consensus as we are leaving the past, but the future.

The plan is a future itself. So, politics may ask for its decisions for the people and the nation.

All new technology and systems are the promise of the future. And we have all the further steps into the universe.

These are the evolutionary changes we have in reality today. But we are trying to offer the future from our office to the world.

It is possible to part with all past realities and choose the future.

And politics has its own decisions.