Only a righteous society makes a state possible. This means that the correct self-construction of politics gives it a future.

A coercive society under authoritarianism exploits freedom. This takes away free social activity and leads to the decline of the state.

Therefore, correct political action gives rise to correct social activity, which in turn leads to the formation of a healthy state.

This understanding and consensus can harness the progressiveness of our times and realize the possibilities of the future.

All inhumane realities are what people do when society tolerates them. These, too, prove that the righteous self of politics gives the nation a future.

This is proof that a righteous world begins with a righteous self. And we may find all these are the nay consensus of all politics and mission.

A righteous nation is necessarily based on a righteous society and way of life.

And politics only make it possible to make any realities. These things can be done to renew the nation by correcting politics.

And we may find any possibility based on that new consensus.

Society and education are the foundation of a suitable future, and the framework of a new nation is the new future itself.
